

Which Economics concentration asks the best questions?

As women's wages rise, domestic violence declines. Are the two related?
Is globalization good or bad? For whom?
Why are some countries so much richer than others?
Why has the gap between rich and poor been growing in America?
Are people selfish or altruistic? Are they rational?

Is it better to prohibit addictive substances, or just tax and regulate them?
Do suburbs make people gain weight? Do food stamps?
What role does racial prejudice play in our society?
Why don't more Americans believe in climate change?
Why are there "missing women" in countries like India and China?

Why do people pay double for name-brand aspirin?
Does immigration help or hurt the job opportunities of American workers?
Is political discourse more polarized along party lines than it was in the past?
Can microloans really lift people out of poverty?

EXPLORE ECONOMICS AT BROWN

Courses offered include:

Environmental Economics and Policy [ECON1350]
Health, Hunger and the Household [ECON1530]
Race and Inequality in the U.S. [ECON1370]
Economics of Mass Media [ECON1400]
Inequality of Opportunity [ECON1375]
Behavioral Economics [ECON1820]
International Trade [ECON1540]
Game Theory [ECON1870]
AND MORE!

Come see an Economics Concentration Advisor or shop Principles of Economics [ECON0110]

Email us at economics@brown.edu or visit the department website at

<http://www.brown.edu/academics/economics/>

We look forward to seeing you soon!